

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

THURSDAY EVE., MARCH 30, 1882.

THE Mason Guards have healed the breach,
By treatment most heroic
And every man the thumb-screw pressed,
He stood it like a stoic.
Indulgence none expected shown,
And not one stopped to ask it,
But coolly marched up to the block
And heads fell in the basket.

THE fruit, so far as we can learn, has not been injured.

PROF. STAMM, of Ripley, is instructing a band at Vanceburg.

W. E. CHRISTY, jail of Fleming county, has resigned his office.

STOCK hogs in Fleming county, are worth $5 a hundred pounds.

THOMAS RUGLES of Tollesboro has sold his omnibus to Basil Pollitt for $700.

MR. J. H. WILSON on Tuesday bought of Mr. F. M. Newton, a two-story brick house on Second street between Market and Limestone, for $4,200.

THOMAS BREEN, son of Mr. Patrick Breen, of East Maysville, was run over by a wagon yesterday evening about four o'clock and was very severely bruised. It fortunately happened that no bones were broken.

WORK was discontinued on Tuesday, at Cox & Poynter's plow factory to allow an invoice of the stock on hand to be taken. The time of resuming work will be determined by the business outlook in the Southern States.

ONE of the dwellings on Front street between Market and Sutton is being repaired and improved and will be occupied by Major Thos. J. Chenoweth as a residence. The property on this street is desirable and will eventually be needed for residences.

THE following marriage licenses were issued in Lewis county during the week past:

Perry Roden and Sarilda Dale.
Frank M. Linn and Lucy Kelly.
John S. Hewitt and Julia A. McKee.
William O. Owens and Kirby A. Harrison.
Morgan S. Evans and Margaret McKinney.

Drowned.

William Hill, a colored man living at Aberdeen, was drowned yesterday, at Logan's Gap. He was at work loading a boat with stone, and by a misstep fell into the river. The body has not been recovered.

MR. H. C. BARKLEY, of the firm of Owens & Barkley, of this city, has made a proposition to the creditors of James R. Pugh, of Vanceburg, which has been accepted by most of them who have been conferred with upon the subject, and will probably be favorably considered by all. Mr. Barkley proposes to take Mr. Pugh's assets and pay the creditors one-third of their claims.

The following is from the Lexington Transcript:

Marshal Heflin says in reference to the last confession of Ellis, one of the Gibbons and Thomas murderers, that Ellis lied when he said he hid in the bushes near the house. There are no bushes within half a mile of the place. The bloody coat was found under a bridge on the Ashland and Cattleburg turnpike, about 200 yards from the Gibbons house, and about thirty yards from where the bloody towel, which was proven to be Neal's, was found. This coat was proven by three creditable witnesses to be Neal's coat beyond a doubt and Mrs. Thomas says it is his, and the one she saw him have on when he went to work the evening before the murder, is a lie made out of whole cloth, except in this: that he was present and assisted in the commission of the crime. The people here regard all such reports as sensational, that have, in fact, no semblance of truth in them, and are becoming each day more convinced of the absolute guilt of all three of these men, Ellis, Neal and Craft, and are led to believe that any reports that change the first confession of Ellis are simply efforts gotten up by the friends of these murderers to shield them and throw around them a shadow of doubt as to their guilt.

ANOTHER STEAMBOAT HORROR.

The Golden City Burned Near Memphis—Thirty to Fifty Persons Missing—Twenty Ladies Lost.

Special to the DAILY BULLETIN.

CINCINNATI, O., March 30, 1882.—Another sickening steamboat horror has just occurred near Memphis. The steamer Golden City, one of the largest and finest sternwheel boats in the Southern trade caught fire at daylight this morning while approaching Memphis and was soon completely enveloped in flames. A large number of passengers, among them many ladies, were on board, and it is estimated that from 30 to 50 of them are lost or missing. Twenty ladies are known to have been burned or drowned. At this time it is believed that all the crew were saved. After the boat caught fire and became unmanageable it floated down to President's Island and sunk. It is a total loss. The disaster is the worst that has occurred on the river for many years.

Shaking Up.

Maj. J. R. Allen, of the Third Battalion, Kentucky State Guards, accompanied by Sergeant Major Kinkead, arrived in Maysville yesterday to investigate, by order of the Governor, the trouble among the Mason County Guards. A meeting was held at the Armory last night and a history of the difficulties from all standpoints laid before Major Allen. The trouble seeming to be irreconcilable it was then ordered that a vote of the company be taken as to whether or not the commissioned officers should retire from their places in the command. The vote resulted in favor of their resignation. Captain Respass and Lieut. Dresell in compliance with the desire of the company immediately wrote their resignations and forwarded them to Frankfort by the hands of Major Allen. That of Lieut. Cochran had been forwarded several weeks ago. The meeting passed off pleasantly and no bad feeling was shown in any quarter. Orderly Sergeant James Sallee will command the company until an election is held for officers which will be next Wednesday night.

PERSONALS.

Points About People Here and Elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rankins arrived last night and are to-day receiving the congratulations of their friends.

Says the Cincinnati Commercial: Frank Pike is receiving congratulations of hosts of friends on his attaining his majority.

Mr. P. W. Suit of Sardis called to see us to-day. He says the fruit in his neighborhood has not been injured by the late cold weather.

Mr. Wils. Hill and Miss Jennie Ridgley, left last night for Cincinnati by the steamer Potomac, for the purpose, it is understood, of entering into the hymenial state. Good luck to them.

Vanden-Arkel.

Mr. Lewis Vanden, formerly of this city, but now proprietor of the Crawford House at Cincinnati, was married on the 28th inst., at that place, to Miss E. M. Arkel, formerly of New York. The ceremonies were conducted quietly and were attended only by a few personal friends of the contracting parties, Tom. Gaddis, of the St. James Hotel being the right hand man. Mr. and Mrs. Vanden are receiving the congratulations of their friends at the Crawford House.

Terrible Calamity.

NATCHEZ Miss., March 30, 1882.—The Ralston Gin, Tensas Parish, La., was washed away, and one hundred and twenty persons who had gone to it for safety lost their lives. It was one of the largest in Louisiana, and was packed full of negroes from the neighboring plantations.

REV. J. M. EVANS preached an able sermon last night to a large audience. At the conclusion of the services he announced that Dr. Guerrant would preach to-night on "The Golden Cities." All are invited to come and hear this sermon to-night.

The Ellis Retraction.

Col. D. K. Weis, who was appointed counsel for Ellis, by the Boyd Circuit Court, says in the Ashland Express:

We know that he, Ellis, has taken back all his statements made before and at the trial, and now declares, that so far as he knows, Craft and Neal are innocent. We believe his retraction of his first confession and his evidence on the stand against Craft and Neal to be false; and that he has been made the dupe of designing men, working in the interest of the two murderers already convicted; and that he was compelled to take his confession and evidence under the delusive hope and promise that if he did take all back, there would be nothing against any of them, and they would all eventually go free. That Ellis was in the Gibbons house the night of the murder, there can be no question. He has stated that he was there, and that statement has been shown to be true; by his minute description of the room on the night of the murder the arrangement and position of the furniture; and especially his statement of the situation of the sewing machine, upon which a lamp was standing and burning dimly when the three entered the room. This statement as to the position of the sewing machine and the burning lamp was corroborated by Mrs. Thomas, the mother of Emma Thomas, who, when she entered the room, found the machine and lamp just where Ellis stated they were; when he and his two confederates were there and when the murder was committed.

Ellis stated on the trial of Neal and Craft, that he was never in the Gibbons house before the night of the murder; and if he had not been there that night, he could not have described the arrangement of the rooms so truly and accurately. He has never stated to any one that what he stated in his confession, and upon the stand in regard to the declared purposes of Neal and Craft toward Fanny Gibbons and Emma Thomas while working in the brick yard during the summer and fall, was untrue. He still says that is true, and the damning evidence against the two still stands uncontradicted; and that against Craft of his hellish purposes is sustained by the testimony of his friend Ollie House, to whom he stated what he was about to propose to Fanny Gibbons, had not House shown himself when Craft was conversing with her at the back gate of Mr. House's yard. No one in this community doubts the guilt of Craft; and very few doubted the guilt of Neal, whose whole conduct after the commission of the crime and before his arrest indicated a disturbed condition of mind. What could have induced him to ask of some of the employees at the Norton Iron works, "If they thought they would arrest him if he remained at his work?" Why did he say to some that he "was afraid to live up there any more because some persons might suspect him of the crime?" Why did he hurry his wife and three little children off to her father's on foot, about five o'clock on the following Monday evening, then about night to walk between four and five miles in the rain, on a raw December day, the children thinly clad and bare headed? These are circumstances pointing to his guilt, and cannot be controverted. These facts were proven on his trial; since which however, other more damning evidence has been brought to light. The bloody towel identified by Mr. Culbertson to be the towel used by Neal at the mill on the night of the murder; found under a fence some three or four hundred yards from the scene of murder; and recently the more startling discovery of his coat found hid under the bridge not over one hundred yards from the place where the towel was found. The coat was recognized to be Neal's by several gentlemen; and identified by Mrs. Thomas as the coat which Neal wore the afternoon before the murder, because he passed her house that day and he had it on then. With these appalling facts staring him in the face, who can doubt the guilt of Neal?
